INVENTION OF A PENNSYLVANIAN.

His Pittsburg Descendants Join a Movement Upon Congress

It is said that a memorial will be sent to the next Congress asking the Government to recognize Thomas Gregg, late of Connellsville, Fayette county, Pa., as the inventor of the first iron clad ball-proof naval ram. Mr. Gregg was the grandfather of Mrs. D. P. Reighard, Mrs. A. Hamilton and Charles Lytle, of Pittsburg, and father of the late Rev. John C. Gregg, deceased, and grandfather of J. B. and U. S. G. Gregg, of Philadelphia, and these latter, business men, are at the head of the movement. They submit as proof of claim a patent granted Thomas Gregg for a ball-proof vessel on the 9th of March, 1814, bearing the signatures of President James Madison, Secretary of State James Monroe, and Attorney General Richard Rush. This patent was renewed in 1837.

Thos. Gregg's Merriman Thomas Gregg was born in Newcastle, Del., and being all his life an inventor, it is scarce necessary to say that he died poor. In early manhood he moved to Fayette county, this State, and made the first ham-mer and nails used in Fayette county. He also made salt, but spent the most of his time making iron, and invented the first furnace ever used for smelting iron by use

JUST HIS LUCE. He met the ordinary fate of inventors. While on a visit to Delaware, his foreman, who had been left in charge to test the invention, stole papers, patterns and drawings and fled to England, where he made himself and others rich on the fruits of Mr. Gregg's genius. Mr. Gregg went on making iron, and during the War of 1812 turned his attention to the subject of ball proof vessels, his labors culminating in the invention of 1813 and patent grant of 1814. In the Journal of the House of Representa-

In the Journal of the House of Representa-tives, March 24, 1814, is the entry:
Mr. Wilson presented a memorial of Thomas Gregg, of Penrsylvania, stating that he had in-vented a ball proof vessel or floating battery, and presenting a model for the examination of Congress and requesting that its efficiency may be tested by experiment. Ordered that said memorial be referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

On March 25, 1814, Mr. Lowndes, of South Carolina, moved that the Committee on Naval Affairs be discharged from the consideration of the petition of Thomas Gregg and that it be referred to the Secretary of the Navy. Mr. Lowndes conceived a prejudice against the invention and became an enemy of Mr. Gregg, using all his influence to defeat his plans.

The model presented was burned in 1836. In 1837 the patent was renewed. Commodore Dupont, of Delaware, tested Mr. Gregg's invention, and was so pleased with it that he commended it strongly to such lawmakers as A. Stewart, Tariff Andy and D. Surgen, of this State, and Messrs. Clayton and Bayard, of Delaware, urging them to push the claims of the inventor.

and impenetrable. In construction it was framed on an angle of 18 degrees all around the hull. The top timbers elevated the balls and the lower ones were designed to direct them under the keel. The power was applied between the keels, where there was a concave formed to receive the motive machinery, the power to be reversed to propel the vessel either way. The principle, it was claimed, protected men and machinery effectually, and was capable of performing more service than half a dozen vessels of Either intelligence of Mr. Gregg's inven-tion got over into Mills Creek and floated down to the Potomae and "on to Rich-mond," or some old-time Southern statesman recollected the idea and imported it to the Confederate authorities, and the result was the production of the terrible Merrimac The Scientific American of May 24, 1864, seems to have been the first to fall to it, and

In the course of our investigations at the Patent Office we have come across a patent granted to Thomas Gregg on the 19th of March, 1814, for an invention of a ball proof vessel to be propelled by steam, which on examination proves to be an almost exact model of the Merrimac. The sides were to be plated with iron inclined at an angle of 18 degrees. And the drawings show a sharp iron prow, evidently to be used as a ram. This prototype of the latest triumph in naval architecture, it will debuy to be used as a name the latest triumph in naval architecture, it will be observed, was patented only seven year after the introduction of steam navigation.

AFTER JUST RECOGNITION.

The next number of that journal, in a page devoted to the subject, headed "The Merrimac Patented 48 Years Ago," gave a cut labeled "The Early Prototype of the Soon after the war some Pennsylvanians memorialized Congress, setting forth that Mr. Gregg had spent much money in his efforts to benefit the Government, and like many other originators had died comparatively poor, and they asked that he be recog-nized as the inventor of the ball-proof iron as the inventor of the ball-proof iron clad, and that a liberal appropriation be made to his widow who was in such circumstances as to render her appreciative of such justice. The memorial still slumbers in the waste lumber gallery along with the French spoilation claims and thousands of others lacking powerful lobby leverage. Rev. John C. Gregg 21 years ago wrote this of the invention and his father:

While sharp competition has been carried on both in France, England and this country as to who is entitled to the credit of this invention which promises to revolutionize the old-estab-lished system of naval warfare, I humbly sub-mit that a reference to the shed system of navai warrare, a number sur-it that a reference to the records of the atent Office at Washington and to some indi-iduals who are still living will moontestably stablish the claim of Thomas Gregg and do ustice to his genius as the real inventor.

The work will be issued by Porter & Coates, of the Quaker City, and a well-known banking firm of this city is backing the project. The book will con-tain a full history of the flood, and will have over 200 steel engravings.

The President Listens to a Sermon in a Church Bullt by Mr. Wanamaker-A Pleasant Day at Cape May-All Callers to be Received To-Day.

CAPE MAY, N. J., June 23 .- A great many people were disappointed this morning because the President and Mrs. Harrison did not worship at the Presbyterian Church here, as a rumor that they would do so had gone abroad. It had been arranged, however, that the Presidental party should attend service at the Beadle Memorial Pres-TO SECURE THOMAS GREGG JUST CREDIT | byterian Church at Cape May Point, which stands directly upon the beach within a stone's throw of the Wanamaker cottage. It

Street Presbyterian Church, Philadelphia, and officiated on this occasion.

The Rev. Dr. Scott sat behind the sacred desk with Dr. Wylie. The pulpit was nicely decorated with blooming plants. The President and wife occupied the second pew, immediately in front of the speaker, with Mr. Wanamaker on the right. Led by a small choir the services began by singing "Praise God from whom all blessings flow," followed by a short prayer by the officiating elergyman. Hymn 83 of the church hymnal was then sung, beginning "Safely through was then sung, beginning "Safely through another week God has brought us on our way." The scriptural lesson read was from the sixteenth chapter of Acta, beginning at the ninth verse. The venerable Dr. Scott then offered a prayer, in which our land and nation, its President and the Government officials were remembered. After singing Dr. Wylie announced his text, found in Phillippians iv., 19: "But my God shall supply all your needs according to His riches in Christ Jesus."

The sermon was an able discourse deligence without cotes and bittened to with livered without notes and listened to with close attention by the President and Mrs. Harrison. After singing "God bless our native land" the services closed with the benediction pronounced by Dr. Scott. Beadle Memorial Church was built by Mr. Wanamaker several years since in memory of Elias R. Mrs. Harrison and Mr. Wanamaker took seats on the verandah, over which the cool refreshing sea breezes softly played.

William McKean, of the Philadelphia Ledger, and one or two other gentlemen were the only callers, it having been both the President and Ms. Wanamaker's desire that only a few personal friends be admitted to-day. To-morrow forenoon, it is understood, the President will receive all who may wish to call. From all the surrounding country to-day visitors have come to catch a glimpse of Cape May's distinguished guests. At 1 o'clock to-morrow the Presi-dent will leave for Washington in Mr. Sewell's private car, but has promised to re-turn on Saturday.

"You fail to see what I am trying to make plain to you, sir. You are one of a class in this city who force themselves into the society of people with whom they are not acquainted, and who come to exclusive entertainments without the formality of an nvitation. Now, if you will take my arm I will conduct you to the cloak room. If you should go alone it would cause comment, but if you will take my arm people will think you are an acquainance."

The interloper took the proffered arm and vanished from the room.

An Alleged Internal Revenue Collecto Rinckmails Jenanette's Lilegal Saloops. ISPECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE DISPATCH.

GREENSBURG, PA., June 23 .- The proprietors of the "speak-easy" saloons at Jeannette have been operated upon by a sleek individual who drew from them a liberal assessment to secure secrecy in their alleged offenses. There are about 30 illegal saloons in the town, and on Saturday a man representing himself to be a deputy internal revenue collector came upon them and assured the breakers of the law that by paying him $50 each he would allow the sale to continue uninterruptedly.

The scheme was successful, and the stranger left the town several hundred dollars richer. A number of indictments are resting in the courts here against illegal liquor sellers at Jeannette, and it is likely other informations will be made, as the kick made by the victims of the sleek stranger has revealed to the officers the location of several that were unknown.

Opposed to Firemen Palaters, The German Trades Assembly held its regular meeting yesterday. A petition of the Painters' Union, of Allegheny, to the City Councils of Allegheny, asking that the engine houses of that city be painted by skilled workmen instead of by the firemen, was indorsed. It was reported that the carpenters are having difficulty with Mr. Herman Straub, the Bloomfield brewer, who is said to be having a house erected by non-union men. The assembly decided to give the carpenters all the moral and financial assistance possible. It Was Only a Cat.

He lound Mrs. Smith and her family, who occupied the house, standing on the sidewalk. They claimed that there was a burglar in the cellar, and that they had escaped. The officer entered the cellar and discovered a cat with its head fastened in a fruit jar, making a noise that sounded something like burglars. It was released, and the family re-entered their house.

A WORK OF CHARITY

Silesian Missionaries of the Order of the Sacred Heart of Jesus

ENGAGED IN A NOBLE CAUSE

Laboring for the Advancement and Care of Homeless Italian Orphans.

IN EARNEST AND ANXIOUS TO SUCCEED

ISPECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE DISPATCH.1 NEW YORK, June 23 .- During the past few weeks, dark-featured women in the garb of Sisters of Charity have been going through the Italian quarters in the Bend and in Little Italy, climbing up dark, steep and narrow stairways, diving down into foul basements and into dens which even a New York policeman does not care to enter without assistance. These women are all slight and delicate. They wear a peculiar veil, unlike that of the usual religious devotees, and few can speak English. They are members of an order entirely new to this country, the Silesian missionaries of the Sacred Heart of Jesus. It is an Italian organization of nuns who look after the welfare of orphans, and all that are engaged in this work are of Italian birth. The half dozen located in this city are pioneers in the United States, and they came upon the solicitation of Archbishop Corrigan and Mrs. Luigi P. Di Cesnol wife of General Di Cesnola, the director of the Metropolitan Museum of Art.

REQUESTED BY THE ARCHBISHOP. The Archbishop and Mrs. Di Cesnola wrote to Lombardy, the headquarters of the missionaries, last November, requesting that a branch be established in this country. They were induced to this because of the terrible condition in which many poor Italian children were in this city. Of the many thousands of Italians in New York a very large majority were sunk in extreme poverty large majority were sunk in extreme poverty and squalor.

This was particularly so in the case of those newly arrived in this country. Unable to provide, with any degree of decency, for themselves, they, of course could do little for their children, and these were allowed to grow up in abject ignorance. Many were abandoned or driven forth into the streets of the hig cuty to have a small the the streets of the big city to beg or steal the means of subsisten means of subsistence.

One cannot walk the streets without encountering hundreds of little Italian boys whose only knowledge of English lies in the phrase: "Shins boots, fiva cents, mists."
The pennies they collect are not their own, but go to some padrone who supplies their outer outfits and gives then a mere pittance of the small amount they earn. Of the Italian girls who are

HOMELESS AND FORSAKEN their misery may not be so apparent, but it is even greater.

The Silesian missionaries came here in March, but were not able to begin opera-tions until some time later. They now oc-cupy a large yellow stone house on East has been long notorious for a small class of hard-faced, persistent people who make the rounds of fashionable entertainments and receptions without either invitations or the acquaintance of the people upon whom they intrude. They are of both sexes, and are alike marked for their brazen audacity. One was well done up last season, and taught a lesson he will be slow forgetting.

A certain club in the West End is noted for its exclusiveness. At a dance given by it this bold intruder put in an appearance faultlessly attired and complacent in prospect of a pleasant evening, topped off with a fine collation. Several of the floor managers happened together and attention was called to the conspicuous stranger, whom none of them knew. By a comparison of notes it was quickly discovered that none of the authorized persons had issued him an invitation, and only one knew even his name. That one approached him and asked:

"Will you inform me whose guest you are

who have no decent homes, but later on we shall look out for the boys also. We include, under the title of orphans, not only the fatherless or motherless, but also the children that are abandoned or whose parents do not properly care for them. We have found that many children are abandoned shortly after they reach this city. Their parents who have come here expecting to be rich immediately, now learn their mistake, and being unprovided with money, they set the children adrift to care for themselves. Then, too, there are many poor Italians who are too, there are many poor Italians who are barely able to supply food for the numerous mouths dependent on them, and they are glad to let us take some of their children and bring them up properly. Of late things have been somewhat better, because of the work of the Italian priests who came to New York at the request of the Pope, but there is still a great deal to be done.

THE MODE OF WORK. We take children between the ages of 4 and 15 years, house, feed and clothe them, and 15 years, house, feed and clothe them, and train them, mentsly and physically, so that they may be good citizens and good members of the church. Our mode of work is to go right down into the Italian quarters, and go from house to house, from apartment to apartment. We are recognized by all Italians, and many of them are glad to see us. We try to learn about all the Italian children we meet, whether they have proper homes and proper whether they have proper homes and proper schooling. I have said that we are especial-ly anxious about the girls just now, and the reason must be apparent. The temptations that a big city like this offers to poor, ignorant girls of any nationality, are very great, and to abandoned Italian girls, who have no means of livelihood and are ignorant even of the language of those around them, they are terrible. At present our means are limited, as we depend entirely upon

PRIVATE SUBSCRIPTIONS. but all the Italians of wealth approve of our course, as well as the Catholic clergy, and we hope soon to be able to do more. As and we hope soon to be able to do more. As soon as our means will afford, we intend to soon as our means will afford, we intend to have a larger house, where we can accommodate all the children that come to us."

The work of these women is very trying, and has many hardships. Any one who has ever been in the Italian quarters where these missionaries go, can realize something of the unpleasantness of their task. Skyscraping tenements in which hundreds of families are huddled together, ill-smelling rooms, drunken men and surly women—all these must be encountered on every trip. Many of these Italians, too, have abandoned all religion and are atheists. They have no sympathy with the meek, kindly-faced women who devote their lives to charity, and frequently are very gruff in their behavior toward them. Still the missionaries persist in their work, and try to save the children of even these men, unmindful of the jeers and even Williams, arrested some days ago for forging the name of Arthur Gorham, of Boston, for a draft of $500, has made another statement of events leading up to his arrest. He states that he nursed Gorham for a month while the latter was sick and that Gorham, on recovering, was very grateful and promised to provide for him all his life. Gorham sent him on a pleasure trip to London with William Prosser, a nephew of Barones Hastings and he (Williams) remained in London several weeks. He then returned to go on the stage in Chicago, but Gorham persuaded him not to take this course and to go on the stage in Chicago, but Gorham persuaded him not to take this course and gave him more money.

Williams then concluded he would go to Australia and Gorham purchased a ticket for him, signing his own name to the ticket for him. Williams says Gorham then wrote out papers for him to sign releasing Gorham for a nominal amount from all claims for services rendered. Gorham said he wished to show this paper to his brother Jum, who was greatly opposed to Williams. He promised to give Williams $15,000 in two years if he would sign the paper, and also give him $5,000 the third year. Williams said he signed the document as A. C. Blake. Gorham then gave him $3,000 and both went on a spree. The next day, when Williams left for Los Angeles, Gorham gave him a check for $100. Williams says that he has no fear of the consequences, that he has no fear of the consequences, that Gorham was very confidential with him, and he don't think the latter can afford to go back on him.

Presidental Plans for the Summer WASHINGTON, June 23 .- It is believed the President will immediately after July l begin the series of short stays at Deer Park which will constitute his summer vacation. The general plan is for President Harrison to leave the White House on Friday afternoons, travel to Deer Park and remain there Saturdays, Sundays and Mondays. The remainder of the week will be spent at the Executive Mansion.

Just Think of It!

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

An All-wool Suit for a boy 15 years of age, short or long pants, $5. A suit that you can find no fault with. Of course it was not made to sell for any such money.

Just think of as pretty a Child's Suit as you have seen. No matter how well dressed or high cost. Our Suits at $5 and $6 are as fine, and perhaps cost as much. Cost is not considered. They are to be sold at the above price. Beautiful and dependable. Our finest Boys' Long Pant Suits reduced from $17 to $12. Men's Cassimere Suits, $10 up to $20.

Bargains all through the house. We have somethingfor everybody. Our own spe-cial make of clothing is so low in price and so high in quality that entire satisfaction is certain. Some unusual values in Merchant Tailoring.
